

Public Body Responding to a Privacy Complaint

These are guidelines to assist you in understanding the privacy complaint process under the Access to Information and Protection of Privacy Act, 2015 (ATIPPA, 2015). You can find additional resources on our website.

Privacy Complaints

A person may make a privacy complaint to the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner (OIPC) if they believe, on reasonable grounds, that a public body has improperly collected, used, or disclosed their personal information.

Remedies

Following an investigation of a privacy complaint, the Commissioner may recommend that a public body stop collecting, using, or disclosing personal information or destroy personal information in its custody. The Commissioner may also make recommendations related to a public body's information practices, policies, or procedures.

The Complaint Process

1. OIPC receives a complaint. We will provide the complaint to the public body and you will have 10 business days to respond. The complainant also has 10 business days to make any submissions or arguments in support of their complaint.
2. OIPC will generally work with you and the complainant to try to reach an informal resolution of the complaint.
3. If we have not resolved the complaint, OIPC may conduct a formal investigation of any unresolved issues.
4. If necessary, OIPC will issue a Commissioner's report with recommendations for the public body.

We explain the steps in this process in more detail below.

Receiving a Complaint and Making Submissions

After our Office receives a complaint, we will assign it to an Access and Privacy Analyst (Analyst). The Analyst will contact you to notify you of the complaint. The Analyst will ask you to provide documents and written representations (submissions) relevant to the complaint. Your response to our Office is due within 10 business days from that date. This response must include the following:

- a response to the issues that the complainant raised;
- any correspondence or records related to the complaint or that might assist in clarifying or resolving the complaint;
- any policies or procedures you have that relate to the collection, use, or disclosure of the personal information at issue in the complaint;
- any remediation plan you have developed to deal with breaches of privacy or inappropriate collection, use, or disclosure of personal information; and
- any additional information you wish to provide in relation to the complaint.

You should provide these documents as clearly labelled, separate files.

If you do not provide your submissions within 10 business days, we will proceed with the investigation based on the relevant information available to OIPC. Without your written submissions, it is unlikely that we will be able to resolve the matter informally, and we will likely have to move the matter to a formal investigation and issue a Commissioner's report. If you are unable to provide written submissions, you should contact OIPC to explain why and to discuss acceptable alternatives.

Claims of Unauthorized Collection, Use, or Disclosure

If the complaint is that the public body had no authorization to collect, use, or disclose personal information, then the public body's submissions should explain why it believes ATIPPA, 2015 authorizes its collection, use, or disclosure of personal information with reference to the relevant provisions of the Act.

Claims of a Privacy Breach

If the complaint is about a privacy breach, the public body should explain the steps it took in managing the breach, including steps it took to:

- investigate the breach;
- contain the breach;
- evaluate the risks to affected individuals;
- notify affected individuals; and
- prevent future breaches.

The public body should also explain what safeguards it had in place to protect the personal information at the time of the privacy breach and whether it plans to make changes to its safeguards in response to the privacy breach. Safeguards relevant to a privacy breach may include:

- administrative safeguards (information practices, policies, procedures, employee training, etc.);
- physical safeguards (locked cabinets, alarm systems, secure storage, etc.); and
- technical safeguards (firewalls, data encryption, multi-factor authentication, etc.).

Informal Resolution

The Analyst will usually focus on resolving the matter informally within a reasonable period of time.

During informal resolution, the Analyst will use your submissions as well as the submissions we receive from the complainant to understand the nature of the complaint and attempt to identify possible opportunities to resolve the complaint in a way that satisfies both the complainant and the public body. Generally, the Analyst will provide you and the complainant with an assessment after reviewing your submissions and the complainant's submissions.

During our efforts at informal resolution, it is important that you respond promptly to the Analyst's questions or requests. If you do not participate in this process we may proceed to a formal investigation without your input.

Possible informal resolution of a complaint may include:

- the public body acknowledging a privacy breach and filing a breach report with our Office;
- the public body taking steps to stop collecting, using, or disclosing certain personal information;
- the public body agreeing to review or make changes to its information practices, policies, or procedures; or
- other outcomes that are agreeable to the complainant and the public body and compliant with ATIPPA, 2015.

In some cases, our initial assessment of a complaint may conclude that ATIPPA, 2015 authorizes the public body's collection, use, or disclosure of the complainant's personal information and the complainant may choose to conclude their complaint on that basis.

Formal Investigation

If there are any issues in the complaint that we have not resolved in the informal resolution period, then our Office may conduct a formal investigation and, if necessary, issue a report with the Commissioner's recommendations. If the Analyst believes more information is necessary, they will ask you to provide further submissions and give you a deadline. We might not consider submissions that we receive after that deadline.

The Commissioner may decide not to conduct a formal investigation in limited circumstances under section 75 of ATIPPA, 2015. Should the Commissioner make this decision, we will notify you of the reason.

Commissioner's Report

If necessary, our Office may write and release a report of our findings following an investigation of a privacy complaint. OIPC publishes Commissioner's reports on our website and we will send you a copy.

OIPC will consider your submissions and the complainant's submissions during the report process. We may quote your submissions in the Commissioner's report. If you have provided submissions or other information that you feel is confidential that you do not want us to quote, you should notify the Analyst. However, procedural fairness requires the Commissioner to provide reasons for any decisions and recommendations. Therefore, we may still need to explain your position on the matter in the report.

The Commissioner's report may contain recommendations that the public body:

- stop collecting, using, or disclosing personal information in contravention of ATIPPA, 2015;
- destroy personal information collected in contravention of ATIPPA, 2015;
- implement, modify, or stop an information practice, policy, or procedure;
- not begin an information practice, policy, or procedure; or
- take other actions related to the privacy aspect of the complaint.

After you receive the Commissioner's report, the head of the public body has 10 business days to decide whether to follow the Commissioner's recommendations. Regardless of the public body's decision, the public body must give written notice of its decision to the complainant, our Office, and any other person who received the report.
